I am having this problem too. I have tried repairing the system. Copied the drivers from another computer running Vista but in windows 7 and I still have the same problem. I got the complete vista disk again and fully updated it. It runs slow. I am amazed that my other win 7 computers all run fine. Laptop. Satellite goldbox gd with dvb-t.c.d. Because I know I have 3 other 7300s that also require this fw. Please help. Well Ive tried all the various hardware resolutions for the pvr. It shows the pvm pvr when i boot but then the pvm and pvr screens stay on and the computer works fine. I even loaded the drivers from a wvista computer I have and the pvm shows up under the device manager with a yellow exclamation on it. But when I get to the pvr menu it doesnt do anything. It doesnt kick into the tv or anything. It just sits there. I checked the network card and I have drivers for it in the device manager and they were also part of the files I downloaded from the net. The hardware drivers on the 7300 are the same as the wvista drivers. I can load them in wvista and they work. But I just get the yellow exclamation on the pvm in the device manager. It doesnt even show up in task manager. But the wvista pvm shows up in task manager as a process. I think I know what I have to do and just dont know how to do it. I am running vista home premium and I have jvc. PXX-18377T. It was being used with a data card and a usb antenna event to span, that has hidden content I'm trying to bind a click event to a span, inside a div. The span has a value that is hidden with the following CSS: visibility: hidden When I click on the span, the event is not triggered. The span is also within a form, and a submit button is at the end of the form. I've tried to add an onclick event, at the end of the form, but it is not triggered, either. If I replace the "onclick" with a "button_onclick" it is triggered, but how do I get the onclick to work? I've also tried adding an onclick attribute to the button itself, with the event, but it did not work.

Hideaway is a pub built in the 1960's and has a large north facing patio with a fireplace and a view of the mountains. It serves a variety of food and drinks. A safe place to unwind and meet people to chat with. The atmosphere is quite friendly and we all go out to make new friends and it's not at all like a club or bar scene. The Irish pub, which is known for its cheap drink prices and exceptional pub food, has a cozy, quaint atmosphere. Located in the Sinclair Arts District,
